

Winners 2021

The Research Grants Committee met in March to review all grant applications for 2021. Ten research grants were awarded in total.

APPLICANT	AFFILIATION	TITLE OF PROGRAMME
Gianluca AMICARELLI	University of Newcastle	Fieldwork title: Multiscale fracture mapping in Havmyran natural reserve (Norway): implications for geo-energy projects
Daniel BELL	Joint Industry Project	Are ancient channel levee systems long-term sinks of terrigenous organic carbon?
Ming Chit Fergus CHENG	ARUP	1. Bringelly Shale - a study of material behaviour 2. Spoil reuse in Western Sydney
Scott JESS	University of Calgary	How do you date a hot spring?
Gabrielle KLEBER	University of Cambridge	Carbon Cycling and Biogeochemical Monitoring of an Arctic Proglacial Spring
Sen LI	University of Leeds	The Rise of Black Shale Giants: Case studies in the Craven Basin (Bowland Shale), Shannon Basin (Clare Shale) and Exshaw Shale.
Symeon MAKRIS	University of Plymouth	Evidence of volcanic debris avalanche propagation dynamics from sedimentology analysis of the Tenteniguada Volcanic Debris Avalanche, Gran Canaria, Spain
Ailsa Katharine NAISMITH	University of Bristol	Investigating spatial distribution and impacts of airfall deposits from the October 1974 eruptive episode of Volcán de Fuego, Guatemala
Emily Jayne SWABY	The Open University	The sedimentology and stratigraphic context of the Toarcian (Early Jurassic) insect-bearing deposits of north-eastern Germany.
Thomas WINDER	Cambridge University	Bárðarbunga volcano summit seismometer deployment – “Certimus on ice”

Huge congratulations to all of the well-deserved winners!

Kelsey Archer Barnhill was also announced as the 2021 winner of the ZEISS-GSL scholarship. Congratulations Kelsey! Read more.

We would like to thank the Jeremy Willson Charitable Trust, the Jeremy Ingham Fund and the Robert Scott Memorial Award for their contributions and are very grateful for the sponsorship offered by ZEISS GmbH.